LEGISLATION.

There has been no amendment or change in the Code of Laws of the District of Columbia relating to insurance during the past year.

The draft of a law which is being prepared by a committee of the American Bar Association on insurance, which the association hopes will become a standard insurance law, has not yet been completed. The Hon. A. I. Vorys, chairman of this committee, has this preparation in charge. It is the hope of the American Bar Association that this draft of a law if adopted by Congress will promote harmony and uniformity in the laws regulating insurance in the several States of the Union.

The importance of uniformity in the laws governing insurance is recognized by all students of the subject.

Practically all of the large companies and certainly those companies transacting three-fourths of all the insurance of this country operate in several of the States.

Insurance is not only an essential in all credit, but it is an absolutely necessary factor in the commercial and industrial life of this country. The development of life insurance in the United States is tending to make it the great institution and method of savings for our people.

The uniform decisions of the Supreme Court for the past hundred years to the effect that insurance is not commerce has prevented Federal laws regulating the supervision of this important business. The result is that insurance is subject to State regulation only.

The citizens of the District of Columbia, according to the best information available, carry a larger amount of life insurance per capita than the citizens of any other political division of the United States. The amount of life insurance in force per capita is $239.40. Oklahoma is rated at $48.29. The average of the entire country is $128.29.

As I have pointed out, the people of Washington pay more insurance premiums each year than they pay taxes. The total amount of premiums paid during the calendar year 1914 in the District of Columbia was $7,037,334.88.

It is just as important to the citizens of Washington that they have wholesome laws regulating insurance as to the citizens of any other part of the country.

The history of the supervision and regulation of insurance by the States in this country makes a most interesting study. It is a part of the great development of modern times which constantly tends toward a more complete social organization. The problems to-day confronting those charged with the supervision and regulation of insurance are no less disturbing and probably much more complicated than those at any previous period.

The American practice in the regulation of insurance companies differs considerably from the European practice.

As a rule companies in this country have been limited to a particular kind of insurance. Life companies do not write fire or accident business; fire companies do not assume life or accident risks. There has begun to be a less artificial distinction. The tendency marked in recent years has been to divide insurance into two separate fields, those risks pertaining to the person, and those risks pertaining to property. There seems to be no good reason why all risks pertaining to human beings should not be written by the same concern, providing for (a) payment at death, (b) payment on account of accident and personal injury, (c) payment during sickness, (d) payment of annuities.

There do seem to be good reasons why companies assuming any or all of these risks pertaining to the person should not write risks pertaining strictly to property, such as (a) insuring against fire; (b) insuring against cyclone, hail, tornado, lightning; (c) insuring against explosions and other accidents threatening property; but there is no real reason why all the risks pertaining to property might not be assumed by the one concern.

Curiously a new invention, namely, the automobile, which is working so many changes in other departments of life, has made a series of complications in the field of insurance. Here is a piece of property which is liable to all the risks of stable and fixed property, which in addition is apt to kill or maim human beings and is also apt to damage other property both fixed and movable.

There is an insistent demand on the part of the companies insuring automobiles for permission to issue a policy covering practically every known form of insurance, covering both damage to the person and damage to property from whatever cause or reason such damage occurs, providing against accidental death or injury of owner, the death or injury of other people, damage to the machine itself, damage to other machines or property. Such coverage would change the American practice, but is the one best meeting the needs of the automobile owner.

One of the needs of legislation in the District of Columbia, in my judgment, is provision for the organization of mutual cooperative concerns. There is no provision for this under the present law.

Mutual and cooperative insurance offers a great competitive factor in regulating the cost of insurance. This factor is of no possible advantage, however, except when the law safeguards the public by requiring the maintenance of reserves which experience has proven ample for the permanency of the concerns.

Life insurance reserves have been worked out as experience has shown which will guarantee financial stability.

Fire insurance reserves have not been put on a satisfactory basis as yet, in my opinion.

Accident, sickness, and liability reserves are also as yet not on a satisfactory basis, in my opinion, in that like fire reserves they are a fixed portion of the premium and not based on the risk assumed.

The risk accepted should determine the reserve.

In fire insurance, however, the reserve is not so vital a matter as in life insurance, but even here the law should provide adequate reserves for all companies, and especially for all mutual and cooperative associations.

Mutual and cooperative insurance concerns have been, as a rule, so limited in area of operation as to make them practically local concerns.

Some of them have shown very remarkable results as to net costs, as to promptness in paying their claims, and as to financial stability.

There are two distinct streams of tendency in the present development in the insurance business in this country.

One is toward centralized control, large concerns, and great efficiency.

The other is toward mutual, cooperative, democratically controlled organizations.

The tendency of supervision and regulation over the large concerns with centralized control tends toward State or Government insurance. The people expect the State to regulate the business and dictate the practices of these concerns.

The cooperative or democratically controlled concerns tend away from State insurance. Examination and publicity are as a rule sufficient for their regulation.

The ideal in the minds of our law makers will largely determine which of these tendencies is to become dominant in the future.

It hardly seems proper that no provision for the mutual, cooperative, democratic form of organization should be found in our laws.

State supervision, as at present organized, unquestionably tends to increase the cost of insurance.

It increases the cost of doing business to the companies not only in the taxes and fees required but in that in the 51 departments of supervision there are so many differing requirements.

The various State departments collect annually in taxes and fees some $9,000,000 from the companies outside of such taxes, State or Federal, as are collected on the property, assets or income of the companies. The cost of supervision in all the States is somewhat less than $1,000,000, or about one-tenth of the license fees and taxes collected through the departments.

All taxes imposed on insurance find their way into the premiums paid for policies and are a part of the reasons for the increased cost of insurance. This increased cost of insurance has led to a widespread agitation for State regulation of rates and rate making.

These are some of the facts which indicate that the large centralized concerns doing so great a part of the insurance business of the country and operating under State regulation and control are tending toward State insurance.

The Supreme Court of the United States last year in the case of the German Alliance Co. v. Ike Lewis, as superintendent of insurance of the State of Kansas, decided that the State has a right to make insurance rates.

It would be interesting to take up a discussion of the entire question of State supervision and control. I shall endeavor during the coming year to submit a discussion of this entire question to your honorable body.

I am moved to do this because in this city, not only the local interests of the people of Washington in insurance is before this department, but because in the civil service, involving thousands of people in the Nation's capital, there is agitation and need for some system of retirement which must take on the form of insurance.

This department also has an unusual interest in the bills introduced into Congress affecting not only the insurance business of Washington but of the entire country.

A bill was introduced in the Sixty-third Congress (H. R. 13769) entitled "A bill to authorize the acceptance and administration of savings by the postal savings bank service of the Post Office Department for crescent life annuities." The provisions of this bill are fundamental in character and of very great suggestive importance.

In a report discussing the history and present tendency of State regulation of insurance, I shall discuss this bill at length.

I am submitting herewith a detailed statement of the license fees and taxes paid by each individual company or concern doing business in the District of Columbia.

Taxes and fees paid by all insurance companies and associations, agents, brokers, and solicitors authorized in the District of Columbia for year 1914.

Total collections for year 1914.			102,773.11

The cost of operating the District department is about one-tenth of the fees and taxes received. There have been no changes in the number of employees of this department since 1906 although the work of this department for the next year will quite double in volume and amount the work of 1906.

The license fees and taxes collected by years from the creation of the department of insurance up to the end of December, 1914, are as follows:

1902.....	$67,077.47	1909.....	$83,632.26
1903.....	77,443.92	1910.....	81,410.34
1904.....	72,385.98	1911.....	88,302.48
1905.....	75,937.52	1912.....	89,816.44
1906.....	75,297.79	1913.....	98,308.21
1907.....	78,377.44	1914.....	102,773.11
1908.....	76,704.30

EXPENDITURES.

During 1914 the total expenses of operating the department were as follows:

Salaries:

Regular employees.....	$8,732.50
Temporary clerks.....	974.00
Contingent expenses.....	977.59
Total.....	10,684.09

The licenses of three concerns were revoked by me during the year. In the individual reports already made the Commissioners you have the history of the individual case which need not be repeated here.

Respectfully submitted.

C. F. NESBIT,
Superintendent.
